Digital disruption: a discussion guide for incumbents

e	Detectable	Clear	Inevitable	New normal isruption	Faint signals with lots of noise	Emergence of a validated	Critical mass of adoption	At scale and mature business model	achieved
	What drives the economics of my	Can I do anything to halt or delay the	Do any of my new ventures give me a	What is a realistic aspiration in the business model, and could current technologies challenge it?	disruption? • What is the baseline trajectory of my	base from which to compete in the new model? Can I get one?	new industry context? Ols my business capable of continual tions	• Are there new business models that can better match the needs of at least	business if I stay on the current path?	Do I understand the radical changes required to errots a new appendix.	self-disruption?
questions	some of my customers?	O How important is pre-emptive action? Do I really have time to wait?	required to create a new economic engine?	o Is an exit the best option?
	Can I be a winner in the new business models? What would that take?	What options and capabilities should I	What do I do with the old core: Keep running it for cash, radically transform build now? How close should they be to the core business?	it, downsize or exit?
		How can I rally support within the organization?	How can I make the case for aggressively shifting resources?
	Acuity	Action	Acceleration	Adaptation
	Gather sharp and privileged insight to work through the noise	 Develop a pipeline of new initiatives with stage-gated investment 	Shift resources (including management focus) from core business to double	Develop talent and capabilities required to compete in the new mod
	Challenge your own story	approach, to create options and build capabilities	down on new ventures	Structurally realign the cost base to actions	View your business through a potential disrupter's lens	Expose the core business to competition with the new ventures	Build a coalition of believers to change mindsets across the organization	match the new profit pools Evaluate 'best owner' scenarios
		If needed, begin transformation of the core business
	Myopia Myopia	Pain avoidance	Inertia	Fit
	Overconfidence	Reluctance to endure pain of upfront	Old centers of power lock in	• Lack of people or capabilities to 199	• Willful ignorance (i.e., not looking for or	Cost	increasingly scarce resources	compete in the new world Likelihood that you're too late to the wanting to see disruptive trends) Entrenchment in orthodoxy	business to cannibalize the core	Legacy cost base becomes an anchorNew initiatives get lip service but little	game game dangers		 Putting short-term results ahead of long-term value 	actual commitment	Unwillingness to make tough owner- ship decisions Possibility that the industry is no longer profitable

Read more: Strategy & Corporate Finance Contact: digital_strategy@mckinsey.com

